

Food industry expertise helps Met-Con serve up success

CASE STUDY

UNDERSTANDING THE UNIQUE REQUIREMENTS OF THE FOOD INDUSTRY IS A MET-CON STRENGTH

The food industry is subject to distinctive rules, among them Good Manufacturing Practice Regulations (GMP). Contractors working in and around food manufacturing facilities must understand and comply with this strict set of safety requirements. Met-Con works closely with food industry clients to go above and beyond a wide range of safety standards—including industry, client and GMP-specific requirements. Met-Con field employees are schooled in industry-best safety practices and those procedures are planned into every project. In fact, more than 60 percent of the Met-Con workforce has been GMP and OSHA certified and is annually recertified. As a result, Met-Con owns one of the best safety records in the industry, and has received numerous safety awards.

HOW MET-CON SETS THE TABLE FOR FOOD INDUSTRY CLIENTS

In the past 30 years, Met-Con has worked with such well-known food industry clients as Malt-O-Meal, Faribault Foods and Jennie-O-Turkey. The continuous growth of these clients has created a need in each case for expanded manufacturing facilities and led to a steady working relationship. The fairly extensive list of building improvement projects and other construction activities that Met-Con provides for these companies includes:

- Millwright and plant maintenance
- Demolition
- Steel erection
- Metal building
- Waste management
- Excavation
- Concrete and masonry
- Carpentry and drywall
- Crane services
